These were (                    2                    )'s concerns throughout her life and her writings are full of such attention from official reports on the health of the Army to advice to mothers <sup>(3)</sup>running their households. <sup>(4)</sup>One of her many criticisms of medical practice in the Crimean War was that no provision was made for systematically caring for the soldiers' health in their daily lives with the medical officers' attention only to the injuries and the diseases.
